

best you can say for the Pan Aruban -- and it now hands itself this accolade -- is that it nourished community activities, and, perhaps more important, it nourished community spirit. Many hundreds of people have gone away from Seroe Colorado saying, "That was fine -- that was a good place to live." And we think the Pan Aruban had a discernible part in making it such. In what indefinable way we cannot say, but we cannot imagine that Seroe Colorado would have been as good a place to live the past three and a half decades without the leavening action of the Pan Aruban.

And this is enough to have made it worth the candle.

A few weeks ago in the States we visited a man who was born in Seroe Colorado just a few months after the Pan Aruban was born, and whose birth was the first to be announced in these pages. He is now thirty-four years old and has three children of his own. This makes a mimeograph weekly that was started by some un-serious young men as a passing fancy feel very old.

It's time to go. Please omit flowers.

It's been fun. It's been moderately remunerative, true, but mostly it's been fun. See you around.
